Hangng Out

STEVEN TABOR 2018

Most people hang their laundry out to dry in the front of their houses, for all to see, in our small village in the South of France.

The soft Mediterranean colors of the houses and alleyways blend harmoniously with the laundry as it dries in the sun. These old roman-era houses would be naked without the laundry flapping in the breeze.

Hanging out the laundry is a decorative gesture, and also a means of celebrating the warm and sunny days of summer.
